BUSINESS ACTION TO TACKLE INEQUALITY

ADOPT RESPONSIBLE TAX PRACTICES

Approaching tax as an essential part of good governance and a fundamental investment in the societies where business operates

The need for business action

To fulfill their critical role in reducing inequality, governments not only need the right policies – but also the resources to implement them. Responsible corporate tax practices help governments advance efforts to tackle inequality and overcome other complex challenges our societies face. These responsible practices are also vital to building public confidence and trust in the tax system.

Catalyzing business action

Businesses can take action to advance responsible tax practices by:

1. Aligning their approach to tax with their corporate and sustainability strategy while also embedding it into corporate governance and enterprise risk management

   A company’s tax policy should be regularly reviewed to ensure it remains fit for purpose and supports the company’s delivery of its corporate and sustainability strategy.

2. Engaging with tax authorities and other stakeholders in ways that protect the integrity of the tax system and strengthen its effectiveness

   Companies should develop cooperative and transparent relationships with tax authorities to support effective tax legislation and administration.

3. Reporting regularly and transparently about the company’s approach and taxes paid

   Companies should consider making their tax strategy, and their progress against it, publicly available – while also being transparent about their policy advocacy activities related to tax.

The business case

Adopting responsible tax practices helps government to invest in and maintain a stable and favorable operating environment for business. At the same time, it also generates other direct benefits at the company level including:

- Reducing regulatory risk: Following responsible tax practices and principles helps companies reduce regulatory risk associated with tax areas that are being targeted by emerging legislation.

- Responding to investor expectations: Showing a responsible approach to tax is increasingly required by investors who are seeking to understand the board’s appetite for risk.

- Meeting the growing demand for disclosures: Embracing responsible tax practices will assist companies in meeting increasing demand for tax disclosures.

- Building trust with tax authorities: Where businesses can improve their relationship with tax authorities through the adoption and integration of responsible tax practices, trust can be built both ways.

- Protecting reputation: Adopting responsible tax practices may help companies reduce reputational risk, build trust and protect key relationships with governments, customers and other stakeholders.

The Business Commission to Tackle Inequality (BCTI) is a cross-sector, multi-stakeholder coalition of organizations and their leaders with the mission of mobilizing the private sector to tackle inequality and generate shared prosperity for all.

For more information and for details on other key business action areas to tackle inequality see the BCTI’s flagship report – Tackling Inequality: An agenda for business action.

US$ 200B
Low-end estimate of government revenues lost to profit-shifting each year